REDUCE YOUR ORGANIC FOOTPRINT

How to Compost in Your Own Backyard

What You Will Need

- A compost bin/container, approximately one yard (3' x 3' x 3') in volume preferred
- Brown material: dry leaves, wood chips, newspaper, cardboard, etc.
- Green material: grass, coffee grounds, fruit and vegetable scraps, etc.
- Shovel or hoe
- Water source
- Shady location

Tips

- Avoid adding materials like pet waste, meat, dairy, and grease to your compost pile.
- Keep your compost pile away from excessive sunlight.

Instructions

1. Add Material: Add brown and green material in alternate layers.

2. Add Water: Keep your compost moist (not too wet), as this will help break down the organic material and keep your compost from drying out.

3. Aerate Compost: Use your garden tool to turn over your compost pile from time to time. This will speed up the decomposition process and reduce the risk of odors.

4. Sit Back: Your pile will break down on its own, and when the material is dark and food scraps are gone, you're all set! Your compost is now ready to add to lawns, gardens and indoor plants.

QUICK TIPS

6 easy ways to reduce your organic footprint

1. Shop with reusable bags instead of single-use plastic bags
2. Instead of disposable cups and bottles, use reusable beverage containers
3. Start a backyard compost pile to reduce organic waste disposal
4. Reduce food waste by purchasing only what you need
5. Grow fruits and vegetables in your yard instead of buying in-store
6. Purchase locally sourced foods when grocery shopping
